

New Zealand Rugby League Serious Injury Reporting Procedure

The following table identifies what constitutes a “reportable” injury, who should report it and when.

What	Who	When
Any incident that results in a players loss of consciousness	The team coach MUST ensure a completed form is completed and forwarded to the NZRL.	Any incident that results in a players loss of consciousness
Any head or neck injury that requires the player to be transported directly from the ground to an emergency department, hospital, or after-hours medical centre.	BOTH the match referee and the team coach MUST complete and return a form to NZRL.	Within 48 hours of the end of the match.
Any injury that results in the admission of a player into hospital after a game.	The team coach MUST ensure a completed form is completed and forwarded to the NZRL.	Within 48 hours of the team injury official finding out that the player has been admitted to hospital.
Any injury that is expected (doctor’s prognosis) to prevent the player from playing for a period of four weeks or longer.	The team coach MUST ensure a completed form is completed and forwarded to the NZRL.	Within 48 hours of the team official being notified of the doctor’s prognosis.

An injury that meets any of the four criteria above requires a form to be completed and sent to the NZRL. If an injury does not meet ANY of the criteria above, a form does not have to be completed.

The team official with responsibility for ensuring that the form is completed is the coach. The coach may delegate the task of completing the form to a manager, team trainer or medic, but the responsibility for ensuring that the task is completed ultimately rests with the coach. If a team does not have an official coach, the responsibility rests with the player-coach or team organiser. This line of responsibility has been put in place for two reasons:

1. The coach usually has overall control of the team personnel.
2. In many instances the coach is the only official associated with a team.

Copies of the Injury Reporting forms for team management/referees are attached and are also available from the New Zealand Rugby League.

Completed forms should be faxed to Canterbury Rugby League on fax (03) 339 0412.
